DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

1. Claim 4 is objected to because of the following informalities: Claims 4 states “wherein the step of data insertion” as being dependent upon claim 1, however the data insertion step is only mentioned in claim 3, thus claim 4 should be corrected to be dependent upon claim 3.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim 8, is dependent upon claim 1, however the antecedent basis referring to “the comparison” in the claim is only proper upon dependency from claim 4, where this limitation is recited, thus claim 8 should be corrected to be dependent upon claim 4.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1, 3, 6 and 9 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Dye et al.,
US 6,879,266.

In considering claims 1, 3, 6 and 9,

Dye disclose Memory F/X technology which may use a priority compression and decompression mode, wherein the priority compression format memory address blocks assigned by the operating system for uncompressed data are used to store compressed data. Fig 45 illustrates the memory module which includes a compressed cache, uncompressed data space and a decompression engine. The memory module is responsive to digital video received in Video I/O Format Conversion block 235 (Fig 3). Thus Dye meets the claimed the limitations of memory of fixed size blocks via the uncompressed memory blocks, where at one of the blocks is defined as a compression/decompression region, and the priority compression are assigned to the uncompressed memory blocks which are responsive to the received video signal (external data).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Dye et al., US 6,879,266.

In considering claim 2,

Dye does not explicitly recite the priorities being set upon access frequencies of the blocks, however these feature is conventional in the art, in order to optimize memory/access by compressing data that is not frequently accessed thereby saving memory space and not compressing frequently accessed data in order to provide the data without requiring decompression.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify Dye which discloses the compressing/uncompressing of data in a digital memory, to utilize conventional memory frequency accessing techniques as claimed in order to provide the advantages as noted above.

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure—see newly cited references on attached form PTO-892.

The Patent Electronic Business Center (EBC) allows USPTO customers to retrieve data, check the status of pending actions, and submit information and applications. The tools currently available in the Patent EBC are Patent Application Information Retrieval (PAIR) and the Electronic Filing System (EFS).

PAIR (<http://pair.uspto.gov>) provides customers direct secure access to their own patent application status information, as well as to general patent information publicly available. EFS allows customers to electronically file patent application documents securely via the Internet. EFS is a system for submitting new utility patent applications and pre-grant publication submissions in electronic publication-ready form. EFS includes software to help customers prepare submissions in extensible Markup Language (XML) format and to assemble the various parts of the application as an electronic submission package. EFS also allows the submission of Computer Readable Format (CRF) sequence listings for pending biotechnology patent applications, which were filed in paper form.
